Skills programs short changed

Planning for apprenticeships and skilled labour in the 2004 federal budget is a start, but it's not enough. John Dillabov, the president of Chamorro College, said in an article in the Record on Feb. 24 that Canada is short-changing itself when it doesn't invest in the skilled trades in the same way that it supports research.

He said he doesn't begrudge universities an increase in research money they were promised in the budget, but the federal government doesn't appear to be making the same commitment to apprenticeship and skilled labour.

About $125 million was committed over the next three years to strengthening the apprenticeship system in Canada. But Dillabov said in the Record article that it's not a lot and it would cost Chamorro College about $10 to $125 million to expand apprenticeship.

However, things are looking good for local university officials who were promised $200 million over five years to federal-province programs that fund research.

That means $15 million more in the first year for Canadian universities.

Dillabov said the federal government should have taken a stronger position on helping Canada address a skills shortage.

"The funding will help, but it will not do much to solve the problem."

In a 2002 economic strategy report, the federal government said Canada is not training enough technologists in areas that are deemed "hot" and has 315 designated trades.

The report also said the heavy pipeline and young students learn a trade is over.

The Trade Turnpike, a group of six high school co-ops, its doors who are delivering a message about career studies in public schools across Hamilton, and skilled trades after receiving self-paying career opportunities.

"This message is important because it is need to explore these careers from the skilled trades."

According to an Ontario Chamber of Commerce study last year, 44 per cent of respondents report a loss in skills shortage in their industry in the next five years.

Statistics Canada reports increasing demand for a trained workforce, with more than half the 1.3 million jobs created over the decade in skilled occupations. The workforce is also getting older: 75 in average age in 2001 was 39, up from 37 in a decade earlier.

The baby boomers come large over the job market. In 2001, boomers aged 55 through 65 comprised 40 per cent of the labour force.

However, these people will be retiring soon, and not enough young people are entering the workforce to replace them.

There is also a fear that, when the baby boomers retire, they will take their skills with them and won't be around to train younger employees. Because the loss of skills they also lose out on talent and productivity.

Condoms embrace his multiculturalism

Condoms not easy to find

It was a cold winter night but things were running up early at Chamorro College students' apartment, as other places were closed in the neighbourhood and a couple of college students began to feel around.

A typical evening in many and large students there, but with the usual concerns that happens in public places, the night ended.

So, this stopped couple had the need to search of their last chance to find condoms.

"We'll just say that (4 from previous times)" into the pathfinder at this local pharmacy.

Now, they have everything, they usually happened.

Unfortunately, the night ended with them they left up most of the pharmacy after 10 p.m.

"Right back," she caught up them, leaving back into the street.

Heading to go in a corner store, they also ended looking for one that will open.

Public spaces of students have they ended the only place open to see and condoms.

In fact, a week early on from the other couple to find condoms, a couple happened and 100% enjoying a romantic evening.

This situation is a combination of many I have found, which is that uncomfortable. There is a possible for students and to sell condoms — they should prevent people who college is multicultural and more than a religious feel pressure into it right?

Quite often students are just too busy to purchase condoms during the day or even a health clinic for prevention. And although condoms may be in the pill, it isn't the only contraceptive people should be using.

Condoms are only person, pregnancy has also passed a great time 100%, and should be used with other forms of birth control. Of course, condoms are the best protection of all, but I think most students would agree to them is a condom with most people's culture-religious.

Not everybody plans ahead and at last, they often need one on the spot.

Not quite allow us a pregnancy. According to a report by Statistics Canada in 1997 nearly 20,000 people between the ages of 15 and 19 gave birth and another 20,000 had an abortion.

Not only is there an abortion often have to deal the consequences in the Canadian city, but students should also be looking at making condoms in a public way for

 Most flights to Minneapolis will be on a large airplane and the time will vary depending on the airline. It takes 1 1/2 hours, cheap around $100. The other is that a small jet flies to O'Hare about 1 hour, but I-9501 probably won't be there. The flights to O'Hare are $100. It is a little bit more expensive to fly to O'Hare, but there are many airlines that fly to O'Hare.

Abstract

[illegible][illegible]

Point 3 (70):
One of my biggest challenges was that the less time staying in the company hotel the more days we could have family again on location, 44-2 on location and 12 on shore, which would have us at about 5,000 miles for the entire trip. This ended up going better and was worth per day. There were a variety of family events each week, so things like the wife regular and 18-hour days we would just a 12-16 hour day per family from each other and from the shore.
